
Kunimaipa

Assignment 1:

- (a) He stayed and then went.
- (b) I will eat and stay (same time).
- (c) You stayed and then he went.

Assignment 2:

- (a) Nomapuho soma
- (b) Nata seke
- (c) Hemana napane

Assignment 3:

Word order: [Verb stem 1][Conjunction] [Verb stem 2]

A Kunimaipa verb stem consists of a root and a person/tense suffix.

	Past tense	Future tense
1st	-oho	-oma
2nd	-eŋi	-eke
3rd	-aha	-apane

The roots are s 'go', n 'eat', and he 'stay'.

Kunimaipa is a so-called chaining language in which successive verbs are conjoined by a morpheme which indicates the relationship between the two verbs in respect to person of subject and relative timing of their performance. Three such conjunctions are found in the data:

- -ata: same subject and simultaneous performance
- -puho: same subject and consecutive performance
- -na: different subject and consecutive performance

The person/tense suffix is normally present on both verbs of a chain. The exception to this is when both verbs have the same subject and the performance of the action named by them is simultaneous. In such a case, subject and tense are marked overtly only on the second verb of the chain, and the presence of the conjunction -ata (same subject and simultaneous action) eliminates ambiguity concerning the subject and timing of the first verb which, in this context, occurs without its normal person/tense suffix.

A vowel is elided (dropped) following another vowel.

– Zarana Sarda
