

Problem 1 (25 points). Here are some verb roots in Barupu and their English translations:

kwau	to vomit	ropoe	to deceive	ura	to swim
kinakina	to think	pako	to be big	yara	to see
risii	to smell

Now you are given some sentences in Barupu together with their English translation:

kempupu	I(F) flew.	koaichori	She sneezed.
namapupu	You(SG, M) will fly.	nanaroponey	I(M) will deceive them(M). kenute	I(F) walked.	nengkwanu	I(F) will vomit.
nawte	He will walk.	kemitimere	We opened them(F). kanayaraw	I(M) saw her.	kereytiromi	They(F) threw us. kemirinu	We pulled her.	kenitinow	I(F) threw her.
kakwaru	He vomited.	nakompu	He will fight you(PL, M). noyaraka	She will see him.	kerekwaru	They(F) vomited. nekinakina	They(M) will think.	nemiropomepu	We will deceive you(PL, M). kemyaichomi	We sneezed.	natirere	He will open them(F).
konrini	You(SG, F) pulled them(M).

(a) Translate into English:

1. kekonu
2. nentinew
3. karoporere
4. nompako

(b) Translate into Barupu:

5. She will throw them(M).
6. We smelled her.
7. You(SG, F) will fight them(M).
8. She swam.

(c) You are reading an old grammar book of Barupu, trying to find the root of the verb to fold. On that page, you encounter the sentence nemipori written on the side of a page (which contains the verb to fold). Nevertheless, both the verb root and the translation of this phrase are missing. What could the root of the verb to fold be and what is the meaning of the sentence you found? Write all possibilities.

△ Barupu is the name of speakers use to refer to the language Bauni. It belongs to the Piore River branch of the Skou family and it is spoken by approx. 300 people in the Sandaun Province of Papua New Guinea.

ng = ng in king; w = w in week; y = y in yam.

M = masculine; F = feminine; SG = singular; PL = plural.

—Gustavo Palote