△ Tlingit belongs to the Na-Dene language family. It is spoken by approx. 500 people of the “Tlingit Aani” district, which constitutes the majority of Southwestern Alaska and Western Canada. g, k, k', s', t', x', x, x', and . are consonants; á, é, ú, and í are vowels. Vowel doubling denotes length.

Raven House, Sun House, and On The Water House are names of Tlingit clans. Winter Village is a place name. In Tlingit mythology, Raven was the creator god, described as a person able to assume the form of a raven and known for being a cunning trickster. Lk'ayáak'w was a Tlingit hero, who chased Dry-Cloud, a mythical being, for months until they both fled up into the skies and could no longer return. Roofing materials in traditional Tlingit houses are made of a form of paper.
